

We are pleased to open a new IFA Scholarship opportunity for all our members. The selected individual will be able to attend either in person or online the Cranfield University Airworthiness Fundamentals course taking place in September 2021. The course has very kindly been donated by Cranfield University. Money raised from the IFA online seminar has enabled us to amend the website and be able to provide funds for accommodation if the selected person wishes to attend the course in person. Money for travel, additional accommodation, food, visas, covid testing and pocket money will not be provided. Any donation funds not used will go towards future scholarships.

There has been a change to the rules and the scholarship is now available to IFA members - individual Professional members, employees and apprentices of Corporate members and employees, students and members of our Institutional members.

Rather than each IFA member nominating just one individual, the opportunity can be offered to ALL, applications will be made using the online form via the scholarship page on the website. Applicants are asked to attach a CV and to write a brief answer to two questions

Why do you think Continuing Airworthiness is important?

How will you benefit from attending the Cranfield Airworthiness Fundamentals course?

Once the closing date is reached the entries will be reviewed and verified. The IFA Board will consider all valid entries and make the final selection.

The deadline for applications is 31st July.
